10 Reasons You Should Use a Travel Advisor

1. They are Experts in Their Field

Just as you would visit a doctor regarding your health, or ask a mechanic about your car, Travel Advisors act as professional consultants in their field. They can recommend an interesting destination you've never considered, which ship excursions to try, or give you an opportunity to get off the beaten path and see something that's uniquely important to you.

2. They Can Offer Unique Experiences You Can't Book Yourself

Travel Advisors often specialize in destinations or niches such as Special Needs Travel, or Disney Cruises. They know their subject inside out, and rather than simply booking a room and a flight for you, they can talk you through options you might not have known existed. We're not just talking simple requests. Want to get married on top of an ancient Maya pyramid? There's a Travel Advisor who knows how to arrange it.

3. Insurance - Things Happen

Luggage gets lost, people get sick, and trips need to be cancelled. Your advisor can offer insurance in a number of different ways to cover anything that could arise on your trip. Travel Advisors insure that you have the correct travel documents so the ship doesn't sail without you. When things go wrong, Travel Advisors have the resources and the contacts to get their clients to the head of the line. Because when you're stranded, the internet won't call you back.

4. Planning an Itinerary

There are not many people who "wing-it" through everyday life, so why would you try that on a trip? Let your advisor plan a concise schedule of what to do every day and keep clear records for you of what is included in your trip. Remember, a good advisor knows not to schedule something every minute of the day.

5. Personalized Experiences

Advisors can craft your ideal itinerary and personalize your experience by putting their knowledge, contacts, and own experiences to work. They'll know what you can expect ahead of time and can make special requests on your behalf.

6. Travel Advisors Save You Time and Stress

It's fun to read about destinations and get inspired on where to go, but the amount of information out there can be overwhelming. Travel Advisors are experts at staying up to date, ranging from what dining options are available at resorts to the size of a room at hotels or cruise ships. They are also well connected, if they haven't personally been to your destination chances are they know someone who has and will guide you to the hidden gems.

7. It's Nice to Deal with a Real Human

Travel Advisors treat you like a person, not a booking number. They want to make sure that you have a good trip, and love hearing from clients when they return from their fabulous holiday. Because of this, Travel Advisors are with you every step of your trip, before, during and after, triple checking that everything is correct before you depart, on-hand to make sure that everything goes smoothly throughout, and there for you afterward.

8. Exclusive Access

Travel Advisors have access to lower pricing as well as special perks and benefits that can save you money while at the same time enhancing the quality of your trip. If you want VIP treatment on your next trip, talk to an advisor.

9. Leverage

Travel Advisors have spent years developing long-term relationships with vendors. Because of this, advisors have leverage when it comes to getting what they want. If you've ever tried to add a last minute addition to a trip and all the rooms are booked, you will have wished you had an advisor.

10. They are Passionate About Travel

An often overlooked trait, a good advisor is passionate about travel and is able to inspire you to visit destinations you've never heard of or simply get you more excited about your next trip.

Preparing for Your Appointment with a Travel Advisor

When do you want to travel (months, dates)?

Any dates you cannot travel?

What kind of trip did you have in mind?

What destinations are on your bucket list?

Number of days you'd like to travel?

Is this trip for a special occasion?

How many people will be traveling?

Activities that would interest you?

What is your budget?

Traveling abroad? Have a valid passport?

Alaska and British Columbia - Epic Wilderness Expedition

Book an Expedition Cruise with Hurtigruten and Save!

Hurtigruten's expedition cruises to Alaska weave along the ruggedly beautiful coastline of North America's northwestern frontier. You'll search for abundant wildlife, such as humpback whales, horned puffins, brown bears, and bald eagles; gaze upon untouched wilderness stretching as far as the eye can see; and observe remarkable landscapes, including snow-capped mountains, calving glaciers, virgin forests, and icy fjords.

Hurtigruten's informal, activity-, and enrichment-based approach to expedition cruising is markedly different than going to Alaska on a large cruise ship. On our longer, more in-depth itineraries, you'll visit remote, rarely visited destinations, offering you an intimate visit with Alaskan culture and local wildlife.

On Select Voyages, Save Up to 15% and Receive an Onboard Credit of $500

Travel is Good for Your Health

Not only can travel be a great way to see the world and experience new places, cultures, and traditions, it is also good for you. Below you will find several reasons why taking a vacation will not only leave you happier, but also healthier.

- Taking vacations can lower men's risk of death by 21 percent and mortality from cardiovascular disease by 32 percent.*
- Among women, a lack of vacation is associated with a higher risk of heart disease.*
- Women who go on trips more frequently are less likely to become tense, depressed or tired and are happier with their marriages.*
- Vacationing improves your mood and reduces stress. It also can temporarily help boost productivity.*
- People who travel more frequently are more satisfied with their physical health and well-being.*
- Vacationing can increase creativity.*
- Traveling with friends increases production of oxytocin, the feel-good hormone our bodies make when we are happy. Oxytocin can make people more trusting, more generous, and friendlier.*
- Travel relieves stress and boosts your overall mental health. It allows you to change your routine and reset your mind and body.*
- Traveling can make you more active. While touring Europe or Disney World® travelers can rack up as many as 20,000-30,000 steps per day. You may also want to try out something new like hiking, paddle boarding, or a culturally relevant sport.*
- Travel improves sleep patterns. Without the stressors of everyday life as well as the added activity that comes along with travel, you can come home from vacation relaxed and well rested.*

Food, Wine and Scenic Highlights

Discover New Zealand and its Culture Through its Food and Wine!

New Zealand – a gourmet's paradise! A land of plenty, a land of fresh, rich foods with distinct characteristics! This journey takes the traveler on a drive through regions accounting for more than 80% of New Zealand's wine production. Combined with the farmers' markets, eateries and artisan food producers encountered along the way, the Classic New Zealand Wine Trail offers New Zealand's most memorable wine and food experiences.
